PREFACE

Many observers of American government agree that there is a need to make the system work better. That requires, among a number of major tasks, improved planning, monitoring, and evaluation of governmental actions. Much of the data necessary, at least to plan and monitor, are routinely collected by local and state government. The task is to create the conceptual and analytical framework in which those data can be put to new uses. To help to create such a framework, the Center for Urban and Regional Affairs (CURA), at the University of Minnesota, has worked with state agencies and local government representatives, with support from the state legislature.

This Atlas is one sample of the large amount of basic, precise work that has to be started and continued as state and local communities attempt to get a better picture of the pattern and consequently of public decisions. Mr. Lee deserves sincere appreciation and commendation for his work.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Many people have contributed to this atlas and my gratitude goes to all of them for their kindness.

My deepest gratitude I express to Thomas Anding, William Craig, James Johnson, and David Ruch at our project. Their suggestions, time, and effort have contributed much to this undertaking and have made it possible. Dr. John Borchert, Professor of Geography and Director of the Center for Urban and Regional Affairs at the University of Minnesota, gave advice and encouragement.

Grateful acknowledgment is made for the cooperation of the following people who provided information and other assistance in preparation of this atlas:

Karen Baker, Tax Research Division of the Department of Revenue; E. W. Eininger, Director of School District Organization at the Department of Education; Erling M. Weiberg, Executive Secretary of the Minnesota Water Resource Board; J. J. Hauger, Division of Health Facilities at the Department of Health; Howard Kaibel, Executive Secretary of the Minnesota Municipal Commission; Lyle McNair, Planning and Programming Division at the Department of Highways; and the executive secretaries of all other special districts and their staff who gave further explanation and assistance. Kwai-Shing Poon, Graduate student of the Department of Geography at the University of Minnesota, prepared the final maps. Kathy Lunde, Nancy Kweik, Barbara Borske, and Barbara Ostrow all provided typing and editing assistance, while Andrew Lindberg did the final proofreading.

Finally, I express my gratitude to the Information Resources Development Fund Budget Review Committee for their financial aid to this atlas.

INTRODUCTION

The purpose of this atlas is to map the principal units of government in Minnesota that are important in the process of taxation. These units include the regional development commissions, counties, municipalities, school districts, and special taxing districts. The information in the atlas is current through October, 1975.

DEFINITIONS

Municipalities include all cities, townships, and unorganized territories. In 1974, the Legislature re-classified all organized places and dropped the categories of village and borough. The school districts include the independent school districts, special school districts, common school districts, and area vocational technical schools. Special taxing districts are single purpose districts that are either created by local action in accordance with enabling laws, or established directly by the legislature. Special district functions include:

- 1) Watershed
- 2) Hospital
- 3) Sanitary and sewer
- 4) Transportation
- 5) Housing and redevelopment
- 6) Recreation
- 7) Mosquito control

SOURCES OF INFORMATION

The primary source of information about the units of government is The Abstract of Tax Lists, which is prepared annually by the county auditors and submitted to the Department of Revenue. Supplementary information on municipalities is available from the Minnesota Municipal Commission, which reports changes to municipalities from annexation, consolidation, and so on. The Department of Education's School District Organization Section is an important source of data on changes to school districts. Information in the atlas on special taxing districts was obtained by questionnaire or from state agencies. Data on watershed districts are available from the Minnesota Water Resources Board. The Department of Health provided information on hospital districts.

The names of the units used in the atlas are taken from The Abstract of Tax Lists and the Department of Revenue Property Tax Codebook for 1975. The numbers used to identify school districts in the atlas are the identification numbers used by the Department of Education.

MAPS

The first section of the atlas shows regional development commissions, counties, school districts, and some special taxing districts on base maps of the state of Minnesota. The second section uses county maps as the base for presenting information on the units of government. These base maps are the county highway maps produced by the Minnesota Highway Department, and were used by Dr. Branko Colakovic in The Atlas of Minnesota School District in 1972.

The maps of Hennepin, Ramsey, and Washington Counties use a scale larger than the rest of the maps. The maps of Cook, Koochiching, Lake, Lake of the Woods, and northern St. Louis Counties use a scale smaller than the other maps, omitting the section lines, but retaining the township lines. Most large counties are divided into several maps.

The elements which appear on the maps are:

- 1) County name
- 2) Municipality names
- 3) School district numbers
- 4) Special district names

RAPID ANALYSIS FISCAL TOOL PROJECT

The atlas is a result of research done for the Rapid Analysis Fiscal Tool Project. The project's goal is to develop a computer-based model of the tax system in Minnesota for analyzing the effects of proposed tax policies. Many parts of the tax system, especially the property tax, are administered by the units of government in Minnesota. The efforts of the project to keep track of the units for data collection led to the preparation of this atlas.

The project has defined one additional type of geographical unit called the location. A location is the combination of one instance of all other units of government; one county, one municipality, one school district, and one special taxing district combine to form one location, for example. A location can be thought of as the area in which the mill rate applied to property is the same for all property owners, using the property tax as an example. The locations are implicit in the maps, since the combinations of units can readily be seen.

Further information on the project is available from the project office at:

LIST OF MINNESOTA TAXING UNITS BOUNDARY AND STATUS CHANGES, 1965 to 1975

MUNICIPALITY BOUNDARY AND STATUS CHANGES

1965 to 1975

The information in this table consists of the changes to municipalities shown in The Abstract of Tax Lists for the eleven year period 1965 - 1975. The date, type, and area involved in each change were obtained from the records of the Minnesota Municipal Commission. The Commission's records show many additional changes to municipalities which have not affected the taxation activity of the municipalities and consequently have not appeared in The Abstract of Tax Lists. The Atlas does not list these changes but information on them is available at the Rapid Analysis Fiscal Tool project office.
